FAQs on The AuD Program at Arizona State University

Q: Do I have to have a bachelor’s degree in speech and hearing to apply to the AuD program?

A: No. Our program is designed so that people from diverse undergraduate backgrounds can complete the course of study. We have students with different undergraduate majors in our current group of AuD students.

Q: How long does it take to complete the AuD program?

A: Our AuD is a four-year program that includes three years of coursework and the equivalent of one year of clinical internship.

Q: Do you offer a distance-learning option for completion of the AuD program?

A: No. Our program is a resident-only program.

Q: Do you have a minimum requirement for GRE scores?

A: We have a recommended Graduate School guideline of a combined 1000 total for the verbal and quantitative portions of the GRE. However, we have no specific cutoff for admission. The GRE is one component of the application and our Admissions Committee also takes other factors into account including undergraduate GPA, letters of recommendation, applicant experiences, the personal statement by the applicant, and other information that may uniquely qualify an individual for graduate work.

Q: How many applications do you receive annually for your AuD program?

A: We have received 40 to 60 applications for each of the last three years.

Q: How many applicants do you accept into your AuD program each year?

A: We do not have a fixed number of applicants that we will accept each year. The acceptance number will vary with current AuD student enrollment, availability of clinical practicum sites for student trainees, and the qualifications of applicants. In general, we plan to admit approximately 10-15 new applicants each year.

Q: What is the cost of tuition at ASU?

A: Tuition at ASU varies from year to year. The current tuition rates can be reviewed at http://www.asu.edu/sbs/fees.html

For additional information, see other sections of our AuD web site.