

A Panel Discussion: The Politics of Race and Gender in the 2008 Presidential Election

Panelists:

Dr. Mary Fonow, Professor and Director of Women & Gender Studies. Her areas of teaching and research are women and work in the global economy, law, policy and social movements, and feminist methodology.

Dr. Stanlie James, Professor and Director of African and African American Studies and Affiliate Faculty in the Women & Gender Studies Program. Her areas of research include women's international human rights and Black feminisms.

Dr. Matthew Whitaker, Associate Professor of History and Affiliate Faculty in African and African American Studies and the School of Justice and Social Inquiry. He specializes in 20th and 21st century North American history, African American history, civil and human rights, the African Diaspora, and much more.

Moderator:

Dr. Ayanna Thompson, Assistant Professor of English and Women & Gender Studies. She specializes in early modern drama and focuses on depictions of race in the Renaissance.

Thursday, February 28, 2008
Language & Lit Bldg Rm 165 (LL 165)
9:00-10:30 AM

All are welcome. Q & A portion included. Refreshments provided.

This interactive event has been made possible through the generous support of the Department of English and the participants who lent their talent and time to this effort. The English Club thanks you all.