chairman's letter

Dear ASU supporter:

I invite you to visit Arizona State University this fall and join the celebration during a very special Homecoming week. This year marks a rebirth of a time-honored tradition for ASU as the entire university community unites to make Homecoming the university's signature event. Not only are we welcoming alumni back home, we are engaging the entire university and our neighboring communities, including citizens, schools, businesses, friends and fans in this defining moment for ASU tradition.

The entire week, Oct. 27–Nov. 1, will be filled with nostalgic activities highlighted with an inaugural block party and culminating with the game against Cal.

Under the leadership of the ASU Alumni Association, and with the support of all university units, Homecoming FestDevil 2003 will showcase ASU, as well as the surrounding communities that help make up the ASU experience.

This university's success stems from the efforts of countless individuals – from those who hold or have had direct relationships with ASU to its tremendous population of supporters. I am sure you will find this year's Homecoming experience rewarding, no matter what your affiliation, as we take this moment in time to celebrate our successes as the New American University.

Sincerely,

R.J. Machulies '62

Homecoming

Block Party

The Arizona State University Alumni Association is planning a mammoth community Block Party to celebrate Homecoming 2003. More than 15,000 people are expected for fun, frolic and festivities as more than 100 alumni, student, staff or community tents will be available for your enjoyment. All members of the community are encouraged to attend.

The Block Party is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. and will span from College Avenue to McAllister and from Old Main across University including the Palo Verde lawn and residence hall complex. ASU President Michael Crow said it has the potential to be one of the university's premier events.

"Homecoming is a time-honored tradition," Crow said. "Not only will we welcome alumni back home, we will engage the entire university and our neighboring communities, including citizens, schools, businesses, friends and fans."

The tents will represent various groups and components that make up the university community. Each of ASU's colleges will host a tent with many of the university's alumni chapters and student groups represented as well.

The Herberger College of Fine Arts will stage its first Art Walk. It will feature 34 artists, all of whom are ASU graduates or School of Art graduate students. The event will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until sunset. Graduates from 1971-2002 will be featured, and the media categories include: painting, furniture and lamps, ceramics, watercolors, photography, jewelry, fiber, digital art, printing and mix media. Dancers, musicians and singers are also scheduled to provide entertainment on stage, and the music will include a mix of salsa, mariachi, jazz and classical.

There will be a Kids Zone, complete with clowns, a slide, balloon tying, face painting, inflatables, bouncy balls, a maze and an obstacle course. That, coupled with an extreme Sports Zone, should provide the entire family with ample entertainment.

Three live radio remotes will be on hand, including KMLE Country 108, KOOL 94.5 and The Zone 101.5. The Rising, an alternative rock band with a current Top-40 hit, will spearhead the entertainment. A second stage will feature the local classic and contemporary rock band Cruz and the Boomers, who will play alternate sets with The Rising. Mariachi Corazon de Phoenix will perform throughout the entire Block Party.

Saturn is the presenting sponsor, and additional sponsors include Coca-Cola, Tribune Newspapers, Infinity Broadcasting, United Dairywomen of Arizona, Hensley & Company and Mark Taylor Properties.

A variety of food will be available for purchase from more than a dozen Tempe restaurants including the Bamboo Club, Blue Agave, Brooklyn Italian Ices, Ducks Restaurant/Holiday Inn, Flip Flops, Kinder's Custom Meats-Deli-Grill, Macayo Depot Cantina, Mamma's Restaurant, Monti's La Casa Vieja, RA Sushi, Red Star, Rinaldi's on Third and Ruby Tuesday.

"The Block Party will add the exclamation point to this great tradition celebrating ASU," said R.J. Machulies, Chairman of the ASU Alumni Association Board of Directors. "There is a commitment across all of the ASU community to make Homecoming 2003 the defining moment for our school's tradition."

The Homecoming Parade will kick off the Block Party at 10 a.m. It will go west along University Drive from McAllister to Myrtle. The Block Party will serve as a tremendous kickoff to the football game vs. California at 1:30, the grand finale to the weeklong ASU Homecoming celebration.

Beginning Monday, Oct. 27, each day will be filled with nostalgic activities. Some of the key events scheduled include: ASU Night at the Movies, ASU East's Homecoming Fest, the Homecoming Ball, a Career Connections event,

“Not only will we welcome alumni back “home,” we will engage the entire university and our neighboring communities, including citizens, schools, businesses, friends and fans.”

Sparky’s Carnival, Alumni 101, Spirit & Cultural Day, the Royalty Coronation, the President’s Kickoff Pep Rally, Lantern Walk, the Homecoming Parade, the Block Party FestDevil and, of course, the Sun Devils vs. the Golden Bears. Immediately after the national anthem at the game, there will be a flyover by the Arizona National Guard consisting of a KC-135 and five F-16s.

Friday, Oct. 31, will be a special day. It kicks off with Alumni 101 at 8:30 a.m. in Old Main and will continue through the afternoon. This new event serves to re-engage alumni with the university through lectures, tours and interactive experiences. Spirit & Cultural Day is scheduled from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. on Hayden Lawn with the Royalty Coronation highlighting the activities at 12:30 p.m.

President Crow, in his second year at the university, will carry on ASU’s tradition of hosting the President’s Kickoff Pep Rally from 5:30-7 p.m. on Alumni Lawn in front of Old Main. That event sets the stage for the Lantern Walk at 7 p.m. when a procession of alumni, students and supporters will continue a tradition that dates to 1917 when candles are carried up the winding trail of “A” Mountain to illuminate the “A” on top.

“Certainly everyone who went to ASU will find the entire experience rewarding,” said Machulies. “We are shaping a weeklong celebration the community will find rewarding as well. The ASU experience is often enhanced by what happens off campus, and it is important these events relate to the entire experience.”

On Saturday, before the Block Party, there will be a Homecoming 5k Fun Run & Walk for Scholarships beginning at the Student Services Lawn, located just north of Lemmon Street, west of Cady Mall (College Ave.).

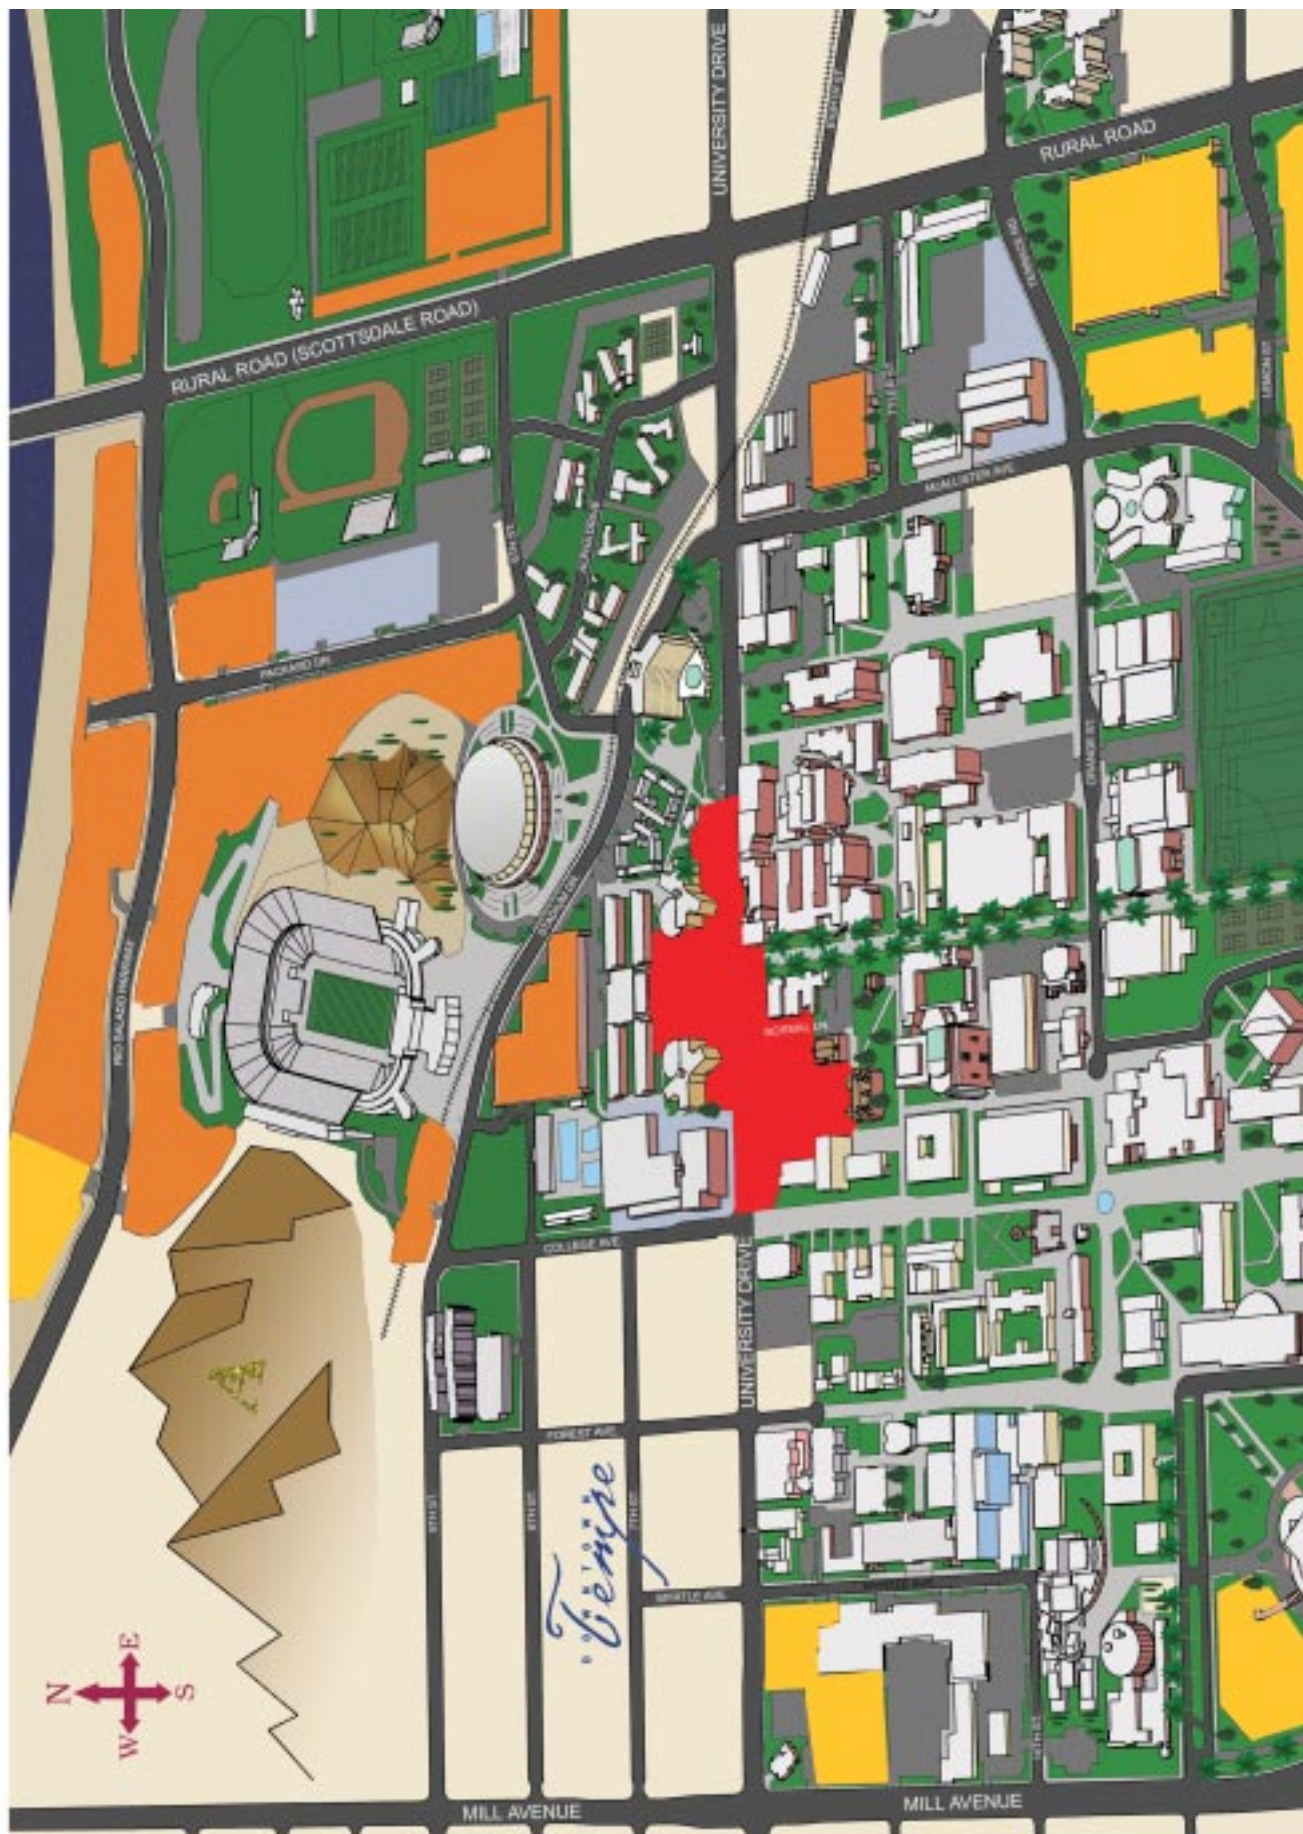

Parking for Saturday’s events will be available on campus south of University Drive for $10. Parking will also be available in the City of Tempe lots. Football season ticket holders should park in their normal assigned lots.

Check out all the events at www.asu.edu/homecoming and make plans to come home Oct. 28-Nov. 1 for Fest Devil 2003. The ASU calendar is filled more than ever before. For more information, contact the Alumni Association at (480) 965-ALUM, 1-800-ALUMNUS or Homecoming@asu.edu.

“I hope you will join me in my excitement about this important university occasion we are planning,” said President Crow. “This Homecoming experience will be a valuable, enjoyable and memorable one that all alumni should benefit from.”

Homecoming FestDevil 2003 will be one of the more festive events ever at Arizona State University. There's the Block Party, the parade, the football game vs. Pac-10 rival California, and now we can add some culture on Saturday, Nov. 1.

The Herberger College of Fine Arts will host the first Herberger Art Walk, to be staged along the sidewalk adjacent to the Alumni Lawn in front of Old Main. It will begin immediately following the 10 a.m. parade and continue until sunset.

"Coming home to ASU is designed to be rich and rewarding, as well as a lot of fun," said Dean J. Robert Wills. "We wanted to celebrate our alumni – and our soon-to-be alumni – and enable them to share their talents with the rest of the campus."

Thirty-four artists, all of whom are ASU alumni or School of Art graduate students, will display their work under 40 tents. Graduates from 1971 through 2002 will be featured, and the media categories include: painting, furniture and lamps, ceramics, watercolor, photography, jewelry, fiber, digital art, printing and mix media.

"This is a juried exhibition and the selection panel has worked to guarantee a diverse selection for the show," said Deanna DePass Stulgaitis, associate director of development for the college and the organizer of the Art Walk. "While most folks will be attending the football game at 1:30, there are some visitors who may find a leisurely stroll through the Art Walk and around the campus their choice for the afternoon. So we are going to keep the art tents open throughout the day."

Herberger College dancers, musicians and singers are scheduled to provide entertainment on stage in front of Old Main during the Block Party. It will include a mix of salsa, Mariachi, jazz and classical music. Security will be provided by the college, and it is hoped the tents will protect the artists and their work from any inclement weather.

"Our academic units are all nationally ranked," said Dean Wills, "so you're going to experience great performance with a light, sidewalk festival atmosphere. It's been our goal to create a day long experience that celebrates all of the arts."

"Homecoming is a wonderful opportunity to launch that endeavor and we hope over the years the Herberger Art Walk will grow and flourish."

Alumni Honored

Homecoming Awards Recognize Excellence

Homecoming is a time when students, faculty and staff along with returning alumni and the community, join together to celebrate the excellence of Arizona State University. As its alumni are the truest products of ASU, it is only fitting that excellence among Sun Devil graduates be celebrated during Homecoming as well.

The ASU Alumni Association, many of the university's colleges and ASU Intercollegiate Athletics annually recognize alumni who reflect the university's excellence.

Alumni Barry Aarons, Terry Goddard and Jeff Patrick have been selected the 2003 ASU Alumni Association Service Award winners for their continued dedication to ASU. All three will be honored at halftime of the Sun Devils' Homecoming game vs. California Nov. 1.

Barry Aarons, a 1971 graduate with a B.A. in political science, has built a record of excellence in all of his professional and personal endeavors and has given countless hours of his time to further the advancement of ASU. His expertise as a public-policy advocate and his commitment to the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences convinced Dean David A. Young to make Aarons one of 11 charter members of the Dean's Advisory Council. He is working closely with Young to secure financial, political and community support for the college.

He has served on the Alumni Association Board of Directors, has helped teach upper-division political science courses, has counteracted prejudice and bigotry in Arizona and the nation through the Anti-Defamation League and in 1993 was presented with the CLAS Distinguished Achievement Award.

Aarons has worked with the Governor's Office in Arizona, and currently owns the Aarons Company and is Executive Director of the Arizona Tourism Alliance and the Arizona Pest Management Association.

Terry Goddard, a 1976 graduate of the ASU College of Law, has been a household name in Arizona for almost 30 years. Currently the Attorney General for the state, his first job was as an assistant Arizona attorney general in 1976. He then became a partner in the firm of Goddard and Goddard and also worked for several years as a pro bono attorney representing central Phoenix neighborhoods in a federal court challenge to freeway routing. In 1982 he co-chaired the Citizens for District Representation, which won the struggle to bring council districts to Phoenix.

But Goddard is best known as a four-term mayor of Phoenix, serving from 1983-90. Under his leadership, the city made significant strides in expanding law enforcement resources, increasing citizen participation in government, revitalizing downtown and setting up nationally recognized programs in arts, culture and historic preservation. He also served on the national advisory board of the State and Local Legal Center in Washington, D.C.

Goddard is closely associated with ASU's College of Architecture and Environmental Design, the College of Law and the Barrett Honors College, where he has provided leadership as mayor and the HUD administrator, participating in the Dean's Forum and the Flinn Foundation. His public service commitment extends beyond office walls as he sits on the board of five foundations in the Valley.

Jeff Patrick is a 1984 graduate of ASU with a B.S. in business management, and is currently the Worldwide Marketing Manager for the Motorola Computer Group. His responsibilities include management of worldwide business development activities for a variety of product lines.

Patrick is a former chairman of the board of the ASU Alumni Association, and has been a vital contributor to his alma mater for 16 years, including working with ASU women's basketball coach Charli Turner Thorne in staging two Hoops for the Cure basketball events. He was an instrumental committee member in fund raising for the events, which benefit the Phoenix affiliate of the Susan G. Komen Foundation.

Patrick's commitment to ASU and the many alumni volunteers has been unquestionable. His experience as a volunteer, chapter president, founder of a chapter in the east Valley and duties as chairman of the board have made him an invaluable addition to the ASU family. His energy, intelligence and dedication permeate everything he does for ASU.

W. P. Carey School of Business

Mary Hentges, who graduated from ASU in 1981 with a B.S. in accounting, is currently a vice president for Finance at eBay, in charge of its Payments Business and CFO of its PayPal subsidiary. Her role encompasses the management of the financial aspects of PayPal including its strategy, financial planning and analysis, accounting, compliance and eBay sourced treasury and internal audit functions.

Prior to eBay, Hentges spent nine years in private business, beginning at Hewlett-Packard and then moving to its $8 billion spinout company Agilent Technologies. At HP she was instrumental in carving out the Agilent Technologies business and taking it public. She not only led the financial aspects of the spinout, she also established a new 100-employee Corporate Finance Team to support the newly created public company.

Hentges began her career in public accounting, working at Ernst & Whinney in Phoenix in the audit sector. She then moved on to Price Waterhouse in its San Francisco Audit practice, where she continued to serve a diverse industry of public and private, national and multinational clients for three more years.

Hentges, who is a solid contributor to the W. P. Carey School, is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the National Association of Black Accountants. She has served on NABA's Corporate Fundraising Committee, and is also a former board member of the Phoenix YWCA.

College of Liberal Arts & Sciences

Lamonte Lawrence, president of the Lawrence Semiconductor Research Laboratory in Tempe, began his career as an engineer with the Phoenix-based Motorola Semiconductor Products Sector. That experience brought him into epitaxial research, an area of materials science that has had profound effects on the semiconductor industry and a field where he has been noted for his work in research accomplishments in semiconductor physics and device technology. He has been highly successful as an entrepreneur in this highly competitive area.

Lawrence, also highly committed to improving the quality of education within the college and ASU, has spent his professional career contributing to the advancement of his industry. He has also initiated a relationship with ASU that has led to significant support for students and faculty of the college as well as ASU's emergence as an international leader in epitaxial growth.

Lawrence's original firm, U.S. Semiconductor Corporation, is widely respected within the semiconductor community as being critical to several advances in the field. In 1988 Lawrence sold his company to Sumitomo, a giant in the field, and founded a new company.

The important advances in epitaxially grown materials developed by Lawrence and his company have been sought after by most of the top firms in the industry, including Motorola, Intel Corporation, Sony, Honeywell, AT&T, IBM and many others. His firms also played roles manufacturing the imagers of the Hubble telescope and in the use of earth oxides for high-energy particle detection.

He has developed an important working relationship with ASU faculty in the materials science area. That has helped ASU become one of the leading centers in epitaxial research. His endowment of the Lawrence Chair and Lawrence Fellowships is further evidence of his commitment to further encourage the relationship between basic science and applied technology communities.

College of Public Programs

Lauren Abel, who earned her B.S. in broadcasting in 1986, is the president and CEO of Abel Associates Inc. and Creative Consortium Inc. in Burlington, Ky. Previously she worked as a free-lancer for ABC, CBS and CNN radio news. She also worked as a radio anchor, investigative reporter, talk show host and public relations coordinator for a major advertising agency before starting her own firm in 1993. Abel Associates specializes in public relations, media relations, crisis media management and training.

The firm only works with clients who agree to perform a significant amount of community service each year, and Abel herself donates 300-500 hours of community service annually. She has been recognized for both her career accomplishments and her community activism. In 2001 Abel purchased Creative Consortium, a network of nearly 500 independent contractors, free-lancers and small businesses specializing in marketing, advertising, web development, media buying and other specialties. ADVERTISING AGE described the company as the first "virtual" agency in the nation.

Abel has earned awards such as Outstanding Woman of Northern Kentucky, Top 20 Female Business Owners, Member of the Year by the American Marketing Association's Cincinnati Chapter and Outstanding Young Woman of America in 1991. She has also earned writing awards from the Radio and Television New Director's Association, the Society of Professional Journalists and the Associated Press.

Keith Ballard received a B.S. in communication from ASU in 1985 and has been the Director of Community Relations for the Sweetwater Union High School District in San Diego since 2002. He focuses on public relations in education and has a local newspaper column on education. Previously, he worked as a music educator for 10 years in San Diego and is continuing as mariachi music chair for the district.

Six years ago Ballard started an African drum ensemble, steel drum band and various mariachi ensembles to attract students of various ethnicities and cultures who would not otherwise have been interested in music education. His program soon became the largest in the U.S. and has expanded to include 11 schools. He made the most of the 73 steel drums himself, investing his own funds, countless hours and teaching hundreds of students.

His groups conduct approximately 60 performances a year, and have appeared on the Donny and Marie Show, Inside Edition and National Public Radio. They have also performed for President Bush, President Clinton, Tom Brokaw, Magic Johnson and Arnold Schwarzenegger among others.

He has won more than 30 teaching awards and honors, including California Music Educator of the Year, California Teachers Association Si Se Puede Human Rights Award, San Diego County Office of Education Teacher of the Year, the San Diego Business Roundtable Best Practices Award and the CBS television Cool School Award. He also volunteers on the boards of the California League of High Schools and the Mariachi Scholarship Foundation.

Michael Hutchinson, a recipient of a master's of public administration at ASU in 1977 and currently the city manager in Mesa, has worked for that city since 1977 when he was hired as an administrative intern. Prior to being named city manager in 2000, he had served nearly 20 years as assistant city manager after working his way through the ranks of administrative assistant, assistant to the city manager and acting community services manager.

Hutchinson implements policies established by the city council and coordinates all city departments and other affairs assigned by the city charter. He is also responsible for the city's budget preparation and developing and implementing management policies and procedures, and has been responsible for numerous management innovations and improvements in his more than 20 years of service. He has been described as the "epitome of professionalism."

Hutchinson has been on the boards of the Mesa Foundation for Educational Excellence, the Arizona State Retirement System, the Data Network for Human Services, the Mesa Economic Growth Association and the ASU College of Public Programs Alumni Chapter. He has also been an active contributor to the International and Arizona City Management Associations and the Arizona Municipal Management Assistants Association.

Herberger College of Fine Arts

Brent Michael Davids earned his master's of music in 1992, and in a little over a decade has become an internationally recognized composer. His work features elements of Native American tribal music combined with Western compositional technique, a style so unique that a member of San Francisco's Kronos Quartet said "nobody else in the world can write music like that."

Davids is a member of the Mohican Nation and has worked and performed with the Kronos Quartet, the Joffrey Ballet, the National Symphony Orchestra, the Smithsonian Institution and the New Mexico Symphony Orchestra. In the late 1990s he was one of six composers invited to Robert Redford's Sundance Institute Film Lab where he created music for the Sherman Alexie film, "Indian Killer."

His work has been recognized in The New York Times and featured on CBS Sunday Morning. In 2000 he received the PBS Eddie Award and in 2002 was selected the Grand Canyon Music Festival's Composer-in-Residence. Davids is currently working on the first authentically created American Indian opera, "The Trial of the Standing Bear." He is also actively involved with youth and community projects.

College of Education

Norma Poling, who received her B.A. in 1953 and her M.A. in 1965 in elementary education, has had a long career as a teacher and an administrator at several elementary schools. She began teaching first grade at Mitchell School in Tempe as a substitute before moving to the Alhambra School District in Phoenix. She has also earned the State of California Life General teaching credentials in addition to her State of Arizona teaching credentials.

Poling was selected as a member of the 18th Academy of Fellows program, and was one of 800 outstanding American educators to receive this honor. The program was established in 1965 to encourage constructive change and excellence in elementary and secondary schools.

Poling has also been honored by the Parent Teacher Association with its highest award, an Honorary National Life Membership. Her dedication and commitment to excellence have given a firm foundation to the harmony that exists between the diverse ethnic cultures.

James Sullivan, who received his Masters in Counseling from ASU, has been a counselor at Yuma Cibola High School since the school opened in 1988. As head of the guidance office, he proceeded to build a program that extends to the middle school where incoming students are asked to begin preparing for college.

Sullivan began his educational career as a Spanish teacher after spending several years in Mexico. He has been honored as Cibola's Teacher of the Year three times; Yuma County High School Teacher of the Year; and in 1996 was recognized by the Arizona Educational Foundation as the Arizona High School Counselor of the Year.

Sullivan has served on various committees, including the Governor's Blue Ribbon Education Committee, the Mayor's Exchange Committee for U.S./Mexico relations and the philosophy committee for Youth Improvement for Hispanics. He has also served as an English/Spanish interpreter for the Yuma City Council.

College of Nursing

Geraldine Rosato, who earned a B.S. in 1979 and an M.S. in 1984, will receive the college's Alumni Association Outstanding Alumni Award for 2003. Rosato was born in Chicago and moved to Phoenix in 1971 with her family. She has been employed in several Valley hospitals but during her teaching experience, her studies began to focus more on the history of nursing.

In 1993 she founded the American Museum of Nursing in Glendale. After eight years of developing and operating the museum, she donated the museum collection to ASU and it is now housed in the Community Services Building in Tempe. Rosato currently works as a museum consultant while further developing her fund-raising skills.

Intercollegiate Athletics

As is tradition for ASU during Homecoming, many colleges and the Intercollegiate Athletic Department have announced their 2003 Hall of Fame inductees to be honored that weekend.

Brenda Calhoun Cash (track and field/1977-81) was a four-time All-American sprinter and hurdler and held ASU records in the 100-meter dash and 100-meter hurdles. She was also a member of the 4x100m relay team that set a national record in 1979. Cash was ranked in the top 12 nationally in both the 100-meter dash and the 100-meter hurdles. She is presently the head coach of women's track and field at the University of Memphis.

Shane Collins (football and track and field/1988-91) was an All Pac-10 selection in 1988, '89 and '91, and a four-time letter winner in football. In 1988 he was named the ASU Freshman of the Year and Defensive Lineman of the Year. A participant in the 1991 East-West Shrine Game, he was drafted by the Washington Redskins in the second round of the 1992 draft. Collins is currently second on the ASU all-time shot put list. He was the 1990 NCAA shot put champion, Pac-10 shot put champion and an indoor and outdoor All-American.

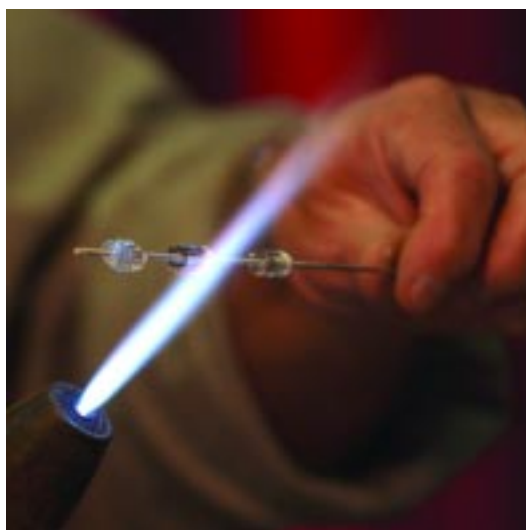

Mike Davies (wrestling/1984-88) was a two-time All-American at 190 pounds and is third on the ASU career victory list with 136. He won three Pac-10 titles in his career and was 40-3 in ASU's 1987 NCAA championship season. During that campaign Davies placed third at the NCAAs and was Pac-10 Wrestler of the Year. He was ASU Wrestler of the Year in his junior and senior seasons.

Dan Hayden (gymnastics/1985-86) was a two-time All-American in four events and a two-time NCAA champion in the parallel and high bars. He led ASU to the 1985 Pac-10 title and the 1986 NCAA championship. In addition to his parallel bars and high bars titles in 1986, he also finished second in pommel horse and third in all-around. Hayden was named the 1985 Pac-10 Gymnast of the Year and the 1986 U.S. Olympic Committee Gymnast of the Year. He also was first at the 1985 USA Championships in parallel and high bars and placed second in still rings and all-around.

Sue Sloan Kelsey (swimming/1977-81) was a four-time All-American, the 1977 AIAW 100 butterfly champion and a member of five national champion relay teams (200 free relay in 1979, 400 free relay in 1978 and 1979 and 400 medley relay in 1977 and 1978). She had an outstanding 1976 Olympics in Montreal where she won gold in the 100-meter fly, silver in the 200-meter fly and bronze as a member of Canada's 400m medley relay squad. She was the 1976 Canadian 100-meter fly champion and placed third in that event at the 1978 World Championships.
