San Francisco Bulletin , 5/22/57,

La Vox de Sonora.--- At the head of the party is Mr. Crabb, an American, as principal chief, who is brother-in-law of the young Ainsas and who last year went with his wife, by Mazatlan to Sonora in company with his brother-in-laws, Manuel and Augustin Ainsa, to become acquainted with the country and prepare the minds of the influential inhabitants. This gentleman, as soon as he received the news of the imprisonment of his brother-in-law, Augustin Ainsa, as a filibuster, returned to California to see in what other way he could arrange the project of the independence of Sonora. The plan of this new expedition is to put to sleep the Mexican authorities by pretending that the van guard go to ~~KIENKIE~~ settle the Gadsden Purchase. With this reserve they can prepare and augment their forces while Augustin Ainsa, now married to a daughter of Don Manuel Inigo, his brother Jesus and his brother-in-law Mr. Tevin are so employing themselves in Sonora in bringing over the influential inhabitants, and afterwards the incautious common people by dazzling them with descriptions of the happiness of the country if emancipated from Mexico
