Died at his home near Prescott, A.T., March 1, 1908, aged 68; an obituary in the Prescott Journal-Miner reads:

In the death of John F. Simmons, Sunday night, at the midnight hour, Yavapai County loses one of its honored pioneer citizens and the Territory a man who assisted in blazing the pathway of civilization over its mountains and mesas, then inhabited by wild beast and Apache Indians who contested the right of the white man to explore and develop its limitless mineral and agricultural resources.

With a party of hardy men and brave women, almost all of whom have passed away before him, John Simmons arrived in Yavapai County from Kansas in 1864. He became identified with the community at once and never changed his place of residence. He settled in Miller Valley and was engaged in farming and stock raising there until his death.

SIMMONS, JOHN FRANKLIN

Simmons' cemetery, in Miller Valley, wherein he will be laid to rest this afternoon, holds the remains of many of his kith and kin, including his wife, a son and one daughter, who preceded him to the grave years ago.
