Research

Is ASU performing any research relevant to Homeland Security?

- The College of Public Program’s Center for Urban Inquiry project is researching the topic of homeland security
- ASU is part of a consortium with other academic and industrial entities nationwide to examine early detection; part of potential chemical/biological defense initiatives
- ASU is conducting research into bioterrorism, developing techniques to help doctors differentiate between bioterror agents and routine illnesses
Center for Urban Inquiry

Study: Human Dynamics of Homeland Security

Lead Researcher: Professor Michael Musheno

Areas of Study:

- How people are less or more secure
- Shifts in community concern
- Governmental policies and media releases
- How individuals adapt to security pronouncements