Segal Named ASU College of Public Programs Associate Dean

(Tempe, January 12, 2005) – Dr. Elizabeth A. Segal, professor and former director of the Arizona State University School of Social Work, has been named associate dean of the College of Public Programs, replacing Dr. Frederick C. Corey who has served in the position since January 2000. Corey will be leaving the College to assume a new role as associate dean of University College and interim director of the School of Interdisciplinary Studies.

Segal, whose Ph.D. is from the University of Illinois-Chicago, is the co-editor of the Journal of Poverty: Innovations on Social, Political & Economic Inequalities. Her research interests focus on poverty, social inequality, child welfare, social welfare policy, social justice and the impact of policies and programs on disenfranchised populations.

According to Interim Dean Jeff Chapman, “Dr. Segal is not only a gifted academic but a superb administrator. Her experience and professional skills will serve the College well as a new dean is identified and our move to downtown Phoenix materializes.”

In her role as associate dean she will focus on student grievances, curriculum actions, personnel policies, committee assignments, faculty retirements, special academic and student affairs projects and other initiatives.
