RALPH W. SWETMAN

At the helm of the Arizona State Teachers College at Tempe, Ralph W. Swetman, president, is expecting a new record in enrollment this year.

Tempe College Grows Rapidly

WITH the enrollment jumping from 523 students during 1929-1930 to approximately 1,000 regular session students last year, the growth of the Arizona State Teachers College at Tempe during the past few years has been close to phenomenal. Besides the regular session enrollment there were 262 students in the summer session and 145 who took college work through extension.

The growth of the Tempe college, which brings it to a position among the largest and finest teachers colleges in the West, is, to a large extent, attributed to the reorganization of the college, the groundwork for which was laid by Dr. Arthur J. Matthews, president emeritus, and carried on by Dr. Ralph W. Swetman, who succeeded Dr. Matthews in 1930.

The faculty, many of whom have been trained by some of the world's most outstanding minds, has attracted students from all sections of the state.

The Tempe college aims to give Arizona boys and girls the finest educational training that can possibly be offered.
