The Arizona resident applicant for transfer admission must have a cumulative grade point average of 2.00 on a four-point (A) scale in all college-level work, and be in good standing and eligible to return to the last institution attended. Students who are transferring less than 12 hours of college course credits must also meet freshman admission requirements; students transferring less than 36 hours of college course credits must also meet subject area competency requirements. A maximum of 64 semester credit hours will be accepted when transferred from community colleges; all transferable community college credits are accepted as lower-division credits and do not satisfy upper-division General Studies or graduation requirements.

The program leading to the Bachelor of Science in Design with a major in Housing and Urban Development prepares professionals for leadership in the development of high-quality and affordable housing. The program is offered jointly with the College of Extended Education in cooperation with the Del E. Webb School of Construction, the Department of Business Administration, and the Schools of Architecture and Design. Instruction by full-time faculty and leading practitioners is aimed at both non-traditional and traditional students. Students attend evening classes at ASU’s Downtown Center and also participate through distance-learning technology.

BSD-HUD students are admitted competitively to the upper division program. The program provides studio and seminar instruction in residential and community planning, design, and development, combined with actual field exposure to market housing and development as well as public and non-profit community revitalization. Courses include construction management, real estate, accounting, land-development law, ethics, and computers. Graduates may pursue careers in private industry, in public and nonprofit housing and redevelopment, or in postgraduate research and education. For more information, call or write:
